Abstract:

The Department of Implementation was established as a result of Judge W. Arthur Garrity's June 21, 1974 decision in the civil case of Morgan vs. Hennigan (US District Court of Massachusetts). The department's mission was to carry out the court's orders to desegregate Boston Public Schools. Its specific duties were to facilitate, monitor, coordinate, develop and provide accurate information on all matters pertaining to the court ordered desegregation. The Department of Implementation II Desegregation-era records spanning from 1975 - 2000 (bulk), document the final decade and an half of the department and the work of several divisions including the Executive Director; the Transportation Unit; the External Liaison Unit; the Student Services Unit; and the Records Management Unit.

Agency History

The Department of Implementation evolved from Implementation Team, into the Office of Implementation, to its final department status. From July 1974 to August 1975, it was the "Implementation Team", comprised of teachers and administrators already employed within the Boston Public Schools. They worked as a committee to plan ways to ensure compliance with Judge W. Arthur Garrity's court orders in the Tallulah Morgan vs. James Hennigan case. The decision, ruled June 21, 1974 in the United States District Court of Massachusetts, required the Boston Public Schools to take action to eliminate racial segregation within its schools. This team quickly learned that the work required of them was more than could be delivered on a part-time basis. Desegregating the Boston schools would take planning, funding and dedication of a full time staff.

The "Office of Implementation" existed from September 1975 to May 1977. The Masters' Plan of May 10, 1975 recognized the need for an agency dedicated to implementing the court's orders. This plan officially established the Office of Implementation. In a response to the Masters' plan, filed by the School Committee, members asserted that the Office would be "the actual mechanism for school system implementation, supervision and coordination..." (p.1, Implementation Process and Schedule for Student Desegregation). On May 6, 1977, the court issued its annual Memorandum and Orders Modifying the Desegregation Plan, which established the Department of Implementation as a permanent unit with four divisions, under the supervision of the Associate Superintendent for Support Services. The divisions were as follows: Senior Officer of Desegregation; Executive Director; External Liaison Unit; Records Management Unit; Student Services Unit; Transportation Unit. The Senior Officer of Desegregation was responsible for implementing court orders, policies and decisions. This position was filled by John Coakley, 1977 to 1986, by Catherine Ellison, 1986 – 1997 and finally by Jack Halloran until 2003. The Senior Officer planned and monitored desegregation activities. The officer served as a link between the BPS Office of General Counsel and the Court appointed experts. The Executive Director was in charge of coordinating daily operational activities and the personnel of all four units of the Department of Implementation. This division had to ensure efficiency of each unit within the department. Catherine Ellison filled this position from 1977 to 1986.

The four units within the department each had their own function. Records Management Unit provided computerized, statistical and analytical services necessary for the assignment, transfer, admission and discharge of students in the school system. This unit created student assignment and enrollment reports as well as state reports to the Department of Education. The Student Services Unit served as the planning and operational sector, concerned with issues related to student assignments, transfers, and the programmatic use of the schools. This unit collected student applications for assignment and transfers. The Transportation Unit dealt with matters pertaining to transportation of students, as well as monitoring bus companies. This included planning, operations, fiscal and monitoring responsibilities. The External Liaison Unit (E.L.U.) served to facilitate the informational needs (related to desegregation) of parents, students, school personnel, and the general public. The E.L.U. was responsible for creating student information booklets annually and monitoring school progress towards desegregation.

Beginning in 1982 the federal court began the process of disengagement. The process culminated in Judge Garrity issuing Final Orders in 1985. The Final Orders removed the federal courts from the majority of desegregation issues and placed the responsibility for developing Student Assignment Plans back into the hands of the School Committee. With this new responsibility the School Committee passed the Controlled Choice Student Assignment Plan in 1988 decreasing the importance of race and prioritizing walk zones and siblings in assignments. The late 1990's were marked by legal challenges to any use of race in assignments. In 1996 McLaughlin v. Boston School Committee challenged the use of race in Exam School assignments causing the School Committee to change the assignment policy and the following year the new policy was struck down in Wessman v. Boston School Committee. Finally due to a legal challenge by Boston's Children First race was removed from consideration in Student Assignments.
