EARLY CHILDHOOD PROGRAMS

Early Literacy Links: ReadBoston literacy staff work with early childhood providers to train them in best practices for developing quality literacy instruction in the preschool classrooms. The program also provides internships for teachers.

Reading Trail: A family-focused home reading program, the Reading Trail enables families with children in early childcare programs throughout Boston to borrow books in order to build literacy development and share the joy of reading at home.

SCHOOL-BASED PROGRAMS

Family Literacy Project: Has served 60 Boston Public Elementary Schools since its implementation in 1998. During the 2006-2007 school year, 7,000 students in 22 schools will participate in the program. The Project provides the participating schools with classroom lending libraries and technical assistance.

Reading Is Fundamental: distributes 45,000 books to elementary school students every school year as part of the national Reading Is Fundamental program. Each year, students in close to 50 elementary schools receive three new books to take home.

Read to Achieve: ReadBoston teams up with the Boston Celtics to promote home reading through the NBA's Read to Achieve program. As part of the program students at schools track the amount of time they read at home and receive prizes for meeting established goals.

COMMUNITY-BASED PROGRAMS

Out of School Time: ReadBoston's Out of School Time literacy specialists work with Boston after-school programs to enhance literacy programming. The program provides literacy assessment, ongoing staff training, program development, and a literacy curriculum. By focusing efforts on training the staff and creating strong literacy environments at these sites, the Out of School Time program is improving students' educational outcomes and their engagement in learning through creative and fun approaches to reading.

Families And Books: The program works with shelter staff, parents, and volunteers in developing libraries and literacy programs geared to the need of each individual shelter.

Storymobile: For six weeks each summer the ReadBoston Storymobiles travel to summer programs throughout the city providing children with entertaining stories and books to take home.

Writing Coach Program: WriteBoston’s Writing Coach Program provides professional development and focused assistance to teachers. The Writing Coach works with teachers to transform the teaching of writing by modeling best practices in writing, and bringing authors, pen pals, and volunteers into the classroom to enhance the writing experience.

Author Speakers Series: Published authors from PEN New England discuss genres and key elements to successful writing with students and teachers. Over 30 author visits have occurred in WriteBoston classrooms, bringing new commitment to the importance of writing.

Pen Pal Program – Committed Corporate Volunteers: Employees from Verizon, Sovereign Bank, Robinson and Cole, LLP, and the Boston Globe have served as electronic pen pals to students in order to provide feedback and an authentic audience for young writers.

Caroline Knapp Journalism Internships at the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald, and the Jamaica Plain Gazette: Summer internships at major newspapers are offered to four Boston Public School students, thanks to the generosity of the Hiatt and Knapp families. WriteBoston coordinates the recruitment and essay submissions, the interview process, and the final placement of students.

“Teens in Print” (TiP) Newspaper: WriteBoston and the Boston Globe Foundation publish the only citywide newspaper written for teens by teens. The newspaper, printed four times per school year, is distributed to over 30,000 Boston teens and actively recruits young writers and artists for submissions.

Summer Journalism Institute: High school students from WriteBoston’s schools participate in an exciting four-week institute where they visit such Boston fixtures as Fenway Park and City Hall. Students are exposed to key writers and famous individuals who have made writing an important part of their lives. Students serve as staff in the creation of an edition of the TiP newspaper.

Poetry Slam and Celebration Event: Starbucks and WriteBoston collaborate to highlight written and spoken word performances during National Poetry Month. Professional slam poets emcee coffee house readings at area Starbucks cafes where WriteBoston students read original poetry in front of community members and their peers.

Professional Development: WriteBoston provides professional development seminars for WriteBoston teachers and staff. Topics of discussion include writing across the curriculum, publishing student work, writing assessment, and preparing for an author speaker.

What is YOU Boston?

A division of the Mayor's Office of Jobs and Community Services (JCS), YOU Boston connects court involved youth with case management, educational opportunities and employment. This is a city-wide program helping young people make a turn toward a positive, self-sufficient future. This is a three-part service system: (1) on-site-step intervention in detention facilities and/or referrals from law enforcement partners; (2) stabilization, assessment, case management and support services provided by Youth Opportunity Boston staff; and (3) referral info on education and employment programs assisting youth on the path to skill development and self-sustainability.

Who is served by YOU Boston?

YOU clients come from many Boston neighborhoods and are between ages 14 to 24. Many are high school drop outs, need to find an appropriate educational placement, and lack basic skills needed for entry level employment. Through case management, mentoring, skills development, counseling, education and a positive social environment, the program connects these young people to their own promising future.

YOU Services:

Connecting During Detention: YOU Boston staff meet youth while they are in detention or incarcerated. We also get referrals from our law enforcement partners at the Boston Police Department, the Department of Probation, the Department of Youth Services, the Suffolk County House of Correction and street workers from Boston's Center for Youth and Families. This first-step intervention sets the stage for high risk youth to develop a strong, trusting relationship with YOU staff. We work with youth to identify their challenges and begin to develop a re-entry plan.

Providing Case Management and Support Services for Smoother Transitions Back into the Community: Returning home can be challenging for high risk young people. Through Youth Options Unlimited Boston, youth have a support network, adult mentors and activities to engage them and keep them on track. Assistance with getting their documentation for work, driver's permits, substance abuse treatment groups and childcare assistance are some of the supports offered. Youth work with their YOU Case Manager to build an Individual Service Plan which is the roadmap for their future success.

At YOU Boston, youth can access a menu of free services for their own self-directed turnaround, including:

- *Get a GED or HS Diploma
- *Participate in a Transitional Jobs Program
- *Apply for entry into college and/or job training programs

- *Learn Basic Computer Skills
- *Get Jobs Placement Assistance

Offering Education to Increase Skill Levels and Get on the Path to Self-Sustainability: At the YOU Center, GED classes are offered by the GEDPLUS/ESAC program; and the Boston Public School's Community Transition School (CTS). CTS is a diploma-based school program for young people transitioning out of detention back into the community. YOU also provides referrals into other affiliated alternative education providers since it is our goal to make sure all young people are working toward an education.

What is the Boston Earned Income Tax Credit Campaign?

Spearheaded by Mayor Thomas M. Menino, the Boston Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) Campaign has provided free financial services to low- and moderate-income taxpayers since 2001. Its mission is to alleviate poverty in the City of Boston by: (1) maximizing the impact of the EITC through free community based tax preparation and education; (2) providing low-income taxpayers with strategies to build personal and community wealth; (3) advocating for fair and equitable tax policies that benefit low- to moderate-income workers.

The EITC is regarded as one of the most effective wage support programs for low- to moderate-income workers. The Campaign provides a foundation for individuals and families to build assets while enhancing the community's collective capacity for sustainable economic development through the following programs and services:

Free Tax Preparation: The Boston EITC Campaign recruits, trains, and manages hundreds of volunteers who prepare tax returns electronically for low- to moderate-income taxpayers at community tax assistance centers throughout the city.

Asset Development and Financial Services: Taxpayers are offered services that can enhance their economic stability including: public benefits eligibility screening and enrollment, credit advising, and on-site opportunities to open bank accounts and purchase savings bonds.

The Ambassador Program: Eight community leaders act as "Ambassadors" for the Boston EITC Campaign by doing outreach to Boston's immigrant communities - Brazilian, Cape Verdean, Chinese, Haitian, Latino, Somalian, and Vietnamese.

The Youth Program: The Campaign manages an after school financial education and career guidance program that teaches low-income juniors and seniors from Boston's public high schools the basics of tax preparation.

Disability Initiative: Since 2005, the Campaign has partnered with the National Disability Institute to improve outreach to and accessibility for taxpayers with disabilities.

Civic Engagement and Advocacy: The Boston EITC Campaign engages volunteers and taxpayers in their communities in its advocacy efforts and is committed to creating an increasingly informed constituency that will call attention to an anti-poverty advocacy agenda.
